

MaGrav: New Dimension Revealed

Machines operating on plasma without electric current

Preface:

After making this video I was going over it again, when suddenly I realized and thought, "oh, what a fool, the thermostat was off, that's why it was drawing 0.0 watts." I was ready to throw it away, but on second thought, "no, this is a live video and an experiment, we are all Knowledge Seekers and we make mistakes, we are only sharing knowledge."

Those of you who could not imagine that machines can run on plasma without electricity, this would be the best time to exit this video. You can safely put it aside saying, "he was a fool, thermostat was turned off, that's all it was. Machines can't run without electricity."

For the true Knowledge Seekers let's continue. The heart of the matter is not about the thermostat, that just distracts and gives people a way out. The heart of the matter is that during the time the heater was off, it was still heating up, as shown by the infrared thermometer.

At Minute 11:15, the temperature on top of the heater is 92 degrees Fahrenheit. At 13:14 the temperature reached as high as 121 degrees Fahrenheit. This is during the time, the power meters were both reading zero. Regardless of whether or not the heater thermostat was set to low and that turned the heater off, which was later discovered. In spite of being turned off the heater was still heating. This is the issue. Did the power come from the plasma through the MaGrav? This is the heart of the matter right here. Discovering the thermostat being turned off is the distraction. The physical instrument, the thermometer is what I am considering, not what the person may have thought, was happening.

INTRODUCTION:

First let me give some background. This MaGrav was built back in 2016 over 5 years ago. It was tested to work and was able to run 3000 watt heaters on it with about only 4% over unity (or free energy). Then brilliant flashes of plasma light occurred with a pop, and it seemed to short out. I left it, and it has been sitting in my room ever since.

Monday January 31, 2022 for some reason I started looking at old photos and feeling love inside for this MaGrav. Then something pushed me to find the old power cords and set it up. I was not expecting it to work. You can see the first video, where I show the Ohm meter having infinite resistance, meaning that by present physics, it cannot pass electricity through the coils to light the bulb. But it did. The MaGrav works.

Then I decided to try the 1,500 watt heater. How it works is, that there is an electric meter at the wall outlet, which tells how much electric current in watts is coming from the Grid. Then there is a second meter connected AFTER the MaGrav, which the heater is plugged into. This tells how much actual current is coming out of the MaGrav and into the electric appliance.

When both meters read 1,300 watts -

Grid meter reads = 1,300 watts

Heater meter reads = 1,300 watts

It means the MaGrav works, but there is no savings of electricity.

When the:

Grid meter reads = 0.0 watts

Heater meter reads = 1,300 watts

It means we got totally free energy - the MaGrav is converting 100% of the plasma into electric current.

When I plugged the MaGrav in the first time. I got this scenario, 0 watts at the Grid, and 1,300 watts at the meter, that the heater was plugged into. I couldn't believe it, after all these years and the MaGrav was giving 100% free energy. I filmed both meters next to each other, 0 and 1,300 watts. It was so amazingly clear. But when I went to watch the video, there was just a blank screen, like pointing at the wall or something. It felt very strange.

Then I went back to video it again, and this present video is what you are seeing. This is what occurred.

To my knowledge of science, we never have had the following occurrence:

Grid meter reads     =     0 watts
Heater meter reads =     0 watts

The Grid meter was reading 0 watts (0.6 watts was the baseline zero). The meter going into the heater read 0.0 watts. I couldn't understand what was happening, I checked the voltage on the meter and it showed 118 volts, the lights of the heater were on, but no electric current was being registered. So I took an infrared thermometer and checked if the heater was on. To my surprise it was heating up. How can the heater be on and not draw any current. Even the MaGrav brought to Washington DC some years ago always showed around 5,000 watts being drawn from the MaGrav.

But what happened here is that, there was no current, but still the electric appliance was working. The other strange thing is that it seemed to happen by its own will. I could not control it. It was like the Gans's creating a plasma dome over Tom Salas's house, protecting it from the hurricane in the Caribbean.

I am not making any claims, I am just sharing what happened with you.
Is this what Mr. Keshe meant by, we don't even need the Gans's?

Interesting note, as this event was taking place, suddenly out of nowhere, I received a message, that Mr. Keshe was on the Brazilian Telegram, which he never did before.

Now that the world peace is about to be achieved, perhaps the MaGrav knowledge will open up for all of us. Please continue to join us creating our intention and giving from our soul to elevate the souls of our leaders to bring world peace, and the opening and elevating of the Knowledge Seekers to deeply understand the MaGrav.
We can do it, We just have to try with all our hearts.