Today's teaching is focused primarily on going deeper into how plasmas are created from M fields. Mr. Keshe made it clear that the Big Bang Theory is really a big fantasy of those scientists who only believe in what they see as real, and the bigger and louder they make it, the more real it is to them. In reality, the whole of the Universe (U) is created from a single Cosmic Ray (CR) of the Creator, and it is at the lowest M field strength. These teachings are turning everything we learned 'upside down.' Billions of dollars are being spent over at CERN using huge amounts of Megawatts accelerating particles to smash into each other in the hope of replicating the Sun. Whether they are right or wrong they have the whole Media promoting their ideas, which in a way, make it more real than the truth. But the key here is that they are generating a relative truth by controlling the information, and when the power behind it collapses so does their "truth." While last May in a prestigious hotel in Beijing Mr. Keshe demonstrated the creation of materials in this case gold, from the M fields of the environment with a few rotating plasma Balls filled with special Gans's and a few watts. The Creator creates all of Life from the gentle and soft M fields of Himself. It's through the Knowledge of Creation that all of what we see appears before us from a single CR. This is the essence of today's teachings and we are fortunate to be able learn more of how the magic of Life unfolds before us and instead just being spectators, we are learning how to become part of it, and co-creators ourselves. There is a particular pattern that Creation follows and was repeated several times today and we'll try to summarize it as best we can. The teachings are unfolding like a spiral and we are going deeper and deeper into the Center.

In general, I understood that the primary pattern of Creation is that a single M field travels to the boundary of a plasma, which is not a fixed solid boundary like we have in matter state, but a spongy area separating the plasma from the outside. The Field goes into that area and bounces off it and gets reflected back into the plasma. During this process it absorbs energy from the boundary. When it reflects back in it crosses over itself, or its previous reflections, and travels to the boundary again and keeps getting reflected back in and absorbing more energy. The crossing points become plasmas. It's like all the crossing points in the Flower of Life. Or if you think of 'chemtrails' left by airplanes as they cross over each others path in the sky. The chemtrails dissolve and disappear. It is my understanding that wherever a M fields travels it leaves behind a trace of itself, though it is invisible. This also makes me think that the M field leaves a permanent trace of itself, that has all the characteristics of the original passing M field. This part has never been discussed before. He talks about the M field lines as if they are permanent, like ink lines left behind on a piece of paper. One day we'll have to explore this aspect. The implication is that the whole internal space of a plasma is filled with these M field lines, like a net or a matrix, and they are all interconnected.

The characteristics of the plasma state is very different than matter state. For one thing, when an object like a bullet hits another object and reflects off of it, the object it hits absorbs some of its energy and the projectile slows down. This is the opposite with plasma. The M fields in a plasma gets more energized when they hit another M field or the boundary of a plasma. This is why the Creator can create with the weakest M field, because it will constantly gain energy as it interacts with other plasmas and fields. It takes time to gather the energies together. For humans, we gather all the little energies together before hand and make a bomb out of it, and that's why we see a big explosion. When we can see and feel something then it is real to us. This is why the scientists are always looking for something big and strong in physicality. If we don't see something big happen, then it's like nothing happens. When humans accept the Energy side of Life then the whole science will change.

But why should the field gain in energy from the boundary? First Mr. Keshe explained that when a single M field gets confined to a space then it leads to creation of a plasma. And it seems that this rule holds for all plasmas including plasmas that get formed inside other plasmas, like the organs in the body for example. It's still this single Ray bouncing off its boundary, absorbing energy, diverting and interacting with itself and filling the whole space with its presence. Where it crosses over itself and converges these points become plasmas. The boundary of a plasma is determined by the other plasmas around it and the space they allow it to exist in. This means the universes around us have made the space for our U to grow into. One of the reasons the M field or a Ray gains energy is the boundary of the plasma is interacting with a stronger field outside itself, because it was that stronger field that created the boundary in the first place. So when a Ray comes into that boundary it has access to those stronger fields and absorbs that energy. As the Ray becomes stronger than the environment it leads to division of itself, and it also diverts or spreads out from its source. So a M field of H coming into the boundary could absorb enough energy that when it reflects back it becomes Deuterium, and so forth. If the speed of the M field is too slow it will get contained. This is the same process that happens in the womb of the Mother and leads to all the cell divisions that build up and create the child. This is how a single Ray can become a galaxy and it's the same process throughout all of Creation. If we get enlightened to this knowledge, then from one Ray we can make gold, copper, life, amino acid, water, and anything we need. We can transmute and physically transfer on a Ray and become part of the source. This is why he constantly reminds us to learn to work with the fields and not the matter state.

Another reason for the absorption is what he called, the principle of dynamic M fields or M fields in motion, which states that the division of M fields leads to creation of a stronger field. This means that if you peel off the outer layer of a M field the fields inside it are stronger than what you peeled off. So when you hit a plasma which is made of M fields, or another M field, the force of the collision gives you access to the higher fields inside it. Remember that the stronger field always gives to the weaker. He said the energy gained is of a different dimension and leads to division of the field. And it sounded like the inherited properties of the field get transferred with the energy. But it is not clear.

Another hint was that, this is why gravity works. The way I understand gravity is that the center G field of the Earth is heavy enough that it pulls all the little plasmas within its atmosphere towards itself because of a common denominator linkage. The strange thing is that it is a gentle background field that is always there and we don't even notice it. But if we accidentally spill our coffee it flows down to the ground and not up towards the sky. There is more to gravity than what we have been taught, I mean in terms of being higher order fields. When the Earth first got formed and the interacting M and G fields came to a balance, gravity was formed and somehow it became heavier and pulled all the plasmas to it. It is interesting to think that this is exactly how a fetus is created in the womb of the Mother. The egg and sperm come together and in that interaction, they find a balance and their mass energy becomes heavier and they start absorbing energy from the womb. In other words, they created a G field for the womb and they pull energy towards themselves and as it gets too much and the cells start dividing. This is the growth of the fetus we can see through a microscope and on videos. He said, it was not a not gentle, process. Whatever that means? And there is absorption, amalgamation of the fields, that reach the point of becoming heavier than its environment. And again it absorbs energy and divides. There is no difference between the process of Creation by a CR and the egg and sperm in the womb.

In summary, Creation has been designed that you don't need big strong fields to create. When you hit other plasmas or fields they are created in such a way that they give energy to you, and they support you in your desire to create something. It's a beautiful understanding of Reality. And it seems that there is like an invisible point or like the tip of a magic pen that draws in Creation. Once the boundary of a plasma is formed this magic pen fills it up. It's like when you decide to draw something on a piece of paper, the pen helps you fulfill your creative urge. But with plasma it is 3 dimensional and becomes alive. There are many analogies about the difference between the plasma and matter states that can be seen in this workshop. One is that if everything is matter, then when I give eventually I will lose all my energy. Whereas as with plasma it's the opposite, it's based on the understanding that everything contains M and G fields, and by the stronger giving to the weaker, the energies continue to expand and grow, and not contract. This analogy can be extended to relationships. Those who are solely based in physicality (P) tend to be takers and eventually they lose because the people around feel the contraction. Whereas the givers continually expand, people not only want to be around them, they also like to give to them so their energy expands more. When we don't understand emotions we tend to think they are just random occurrences that just happen. But we are actually plasmas and emotions are field strengths that we generate. And if we study them carefully we might find they follow the laws of plasmas, and when we deny the plasma, we appear to put ourselves under the matter state laws. It's very fascinating and enlightening to observe and if we understand it, we can help educate others on how to free up the plasma when it gets stuck under the matter state.

Mr. Keshe spent the last part of the first half of the teachings talking about how the chicken creates the hard shell of an egg inside itself from the Ca. He didn't really say how it is done, but just gave us a lot to think about. The same way the STM creates the skull is the same way the chicken creates the egg. But the Soul of the chicken is not in the center of the unfertilized egg. If the Soul of the chicken is in the center of its head, then it controls the process through emotion from there, the same way the STM creates the rest of the bone structures in the body, which is reverse to the way the skull is created. After studying how a chickens makes an egg I understood that he is speaking figuratively, or by the essence of the process. The chicken actually has like a 'production line' of organs that are similar looking to the intestines and there are several steps to the production. When watching the videos one gets the sense that it is totally controlled by M fields. In matter state they do not accept transmutation of fields into matter, so they say, water enters the process by osmosis. It's interesting that the egg starts to rotate during the process because Mr. Keshe talked about how fields make the plasma dynamic. Then the egg comes into the womb like chamber where the Ca is added, and it does it by hexagonal shapes connected together, much like the skin of the Man. Also if the hen gets disturbed emotionally then she might not be able to produce an egg.

From the plasma point of view he brought up different things for us to think about in regards to the egg. If 2 CR or M fields interact with each other and their environment, and because they have 2 different strengths even if they come from the same source, they will create dynamic motion and dynamic plasma and somehow this creates that spongy boundary of the plasma that gives energy to the M fields that enter it. Then another clue was that when a plasma stops being dynamic it converts to matter state. And that every cell has a Ca in it. So it seems that somehow through its emotion the chicken is able to transmute the fields in the outer boundary of the egg into the matter state as a Ca shell. This is the same pattern in all of Creation. If a chicken can easily and naturally do it every day, why can't we?

One of the principles of plasma is that of Twinity, where one plasma balances and helps hold the structure by another plasma. For example, we have a Twin Sun that balances our Sun and helps hold our Solar System (SS) in place. If you remember when Mr. Keshe demonstrated flight with Space reactors in Iran there were two reactors. We are used to only seeing UFO's as single, but they must have some kind of Twinity, either as a Mother ship or their home planet. It probably didn't occur to us that the Womb of the Mother also has a Twinity, because we just assumed the sperm disappeared into the egg. Now he is explaining to us that the placenta is a separate entity inside the womb that is created from the fields of the sperm. It's an independent entity that supports and helps feed the growing child and it remains there only as long as it is needed and is ejected at birth. In Chinese Medicine they call it something like, 'the boat that carries you across life.' The Mothers will dry it and keep it as an herb and if the child gets seriously ill later on they can use it to restore life. The Rulers of the planet have set it up so that in modern society the father is very weak and almost non-existent in many of the children's lives, especially in Western culture. And yet from the point of view of Energy the father is always there and cannot be erased, and as Mr. Keshe said, he is supporting us, hidden in the womb.

When 2026 started Mr. Keshe clearly laid out China's plan for domination of the world through Rare Earth materials and they also stopped the flow of silver into the market, and this would cause the West to adopt the Plasma T. A few days later we saw the kidnapping of the President of Venezuela, which is a country with undeveloped resources in Rare Earth materials and has large significant amounts of silver. As the country was taken over illegally, we can understand who will also illegally takeover the Oil companies. Publicly and without shame Mr. Trump threatened the leaders not to go against the US. In the 1930's we saw the same thing when one tyrant invaded another country, and when the world didn't respond he continued to invade until he started a World War. Now Trump is making advances towards Greenland which is also rich in untapped Rare Earth materials. And still the world is not responding, but of course we know why. In today's workshop Mr. Keshe said the decision is his of whether or not to continue to allow this behavior, or to release the Technology and collapse both the Oil and Gold industries overnight. He also said the changes in 2026 would start right away and indeed they have, but how it will turn out, we have to wait and see.

There was a very important teaching on the different types of field and wave interactions. It's a little difficult to follow try to watch it several times. What I understood is that the interactions of the fields, and the waves created by the fields, both can create matter. He drew the fields traveling like a wave and then at the end it produced a wave that traveled back alongside the field. Then the two created waves of themselves and further interacted with each other. This is why it can be confusing. What he called number 1 is when waves of fields interacted with waves of waves. And number 2 is when fields interact with fields. What's interesting is that waves are like copies of fields and have the same power to create matter. One example, is that emotions are created from waves of fields in the brain. This is totally different than matter state where waves and fields do not have the power to create matter. For example, if we hit a hammer on a metal the sound waves created cannot recreate the hammer and the metal. But in plasma they can. In matter state the fields and waves continually decrease in strength until they die out. Then he said, whenever there is a dynamic movement it spreads throughout the U as a wave. The field doesn't have to be there. But the properties of the field are in the wave that created it.

A further example of how important understanding waves of fields are, was illustrated in his discussion of how the energy of the information of the DNA is transmitted to the skull by waves. First of all the skull is not attached to any bone structure in the body or directly to the spinal column, therefore how can it be informed of what changes in size to make, and whatever else is needed during the growth process of the body? In a way, the skull just kind of floats on top of the spinal column. Obviously there are ligaments holding it in place, but the point is there is no structural connection. The waves of the field strength of the Soul maintain its development. The fields of the STM are slightly different than waves and they lead to the creation of the skull bone. We know that the DNA carries the information of how to create the cells and what functions they will have. But we never thought about how it works through the plasma. Today he introduced that there is an energy function of this information that is passed to the cells on the level of the plasma. He did not go into details about it other then to say that, the skull is kept up to date with all the DNA information through the process of the waves of the fields of the Soul.

There was an interesting discussion regarding the raising of Kundalini as taught by Indian Gurus. We've discussed before about the "Spiritual Entertainment Business" that has a huge market for rich Western people who are lost and bored. The worldly Gurus and the famous ones have learned to do magic tricks through Mantra, which to Western atheistic science is considered impossible. So if a Western orientated person witnesses the impossible, and if they have been programmed to only believe in the P as real, then they easily get hooked on a Guru like a drug. Mr. Keshe explained that these Gurus have learned to expand their emotion to interact with the Earth's G field and can levitate. It is nothing more than that. And of course they can do other tricks, except to truly be humble and love unconditionally. There is never any doubt with the true Gurus because the message of their life is one of service and unconditional love. And those who teach the true Truth don't have many followers. When we learn to live through our Soul then nobody can fool us, because we are connected to all of Creation through plasma, and not the P.

The scientific part of the discussion was that the spinal column is made with different types of vertebrae and each have a different field strength. He said, the spinal column was purposely constructed with an energy gradient and that if you try to move the energy through then you can damage them and create mayhem in the center of the brain. This is so fascinating because that is exactly what happened to Gopi Krishna. He raised the Kundalini without help and almost lost his life. Luckily he had a loving wife who nursed him back to health. The way I understood Mr. Keshe's reply was that, raising the Energy is a physical process related to the energy and the fields. Because the KS said, other people are getting enlightened by this method, then he replied they are two different things, meaning this is not about enlightenment. Indian spirituality has put the concept that, one has to raise the Kundalini to get enlightened into our heads. Whether it's true or not is for each of us to discover through our own process. For me Kundalini is referring to experience the Energy of the STM. And in a way, enlightenment is knowing the Soul and living in that awareness. It's for the STP to realize and the P to accept. Mr. Keshe never directly answered this question. Instead he went on to explain how the fields of the STM work and how emotions are created by the waves of those fields. The fields of the Soul cannot be limited by the physical skull. And when we learn to control and create emotions we can learn to use the waves and convert ourselves back into energy and transmute.

The main thing holding KS back from transmuting is the attachment to physicality and the matter state. If we detach from P we can convert ourselves back into energy and as a M field package, send it down a telephone and re-manifest at the other end. The P is created by frequency and the Soul is M field strength, which we control through our emotions. And that nobody can do anything to us if we don't allow them. Unfortunately, through the education system, Hollywood, and the Media they found ways to get our permission to abuse us, and that's why we accept to be victims. But the reality is no one can enter our plasma without our permission. It's for us to investigate our own power and enlighten ourselves. The enlightenment cannot be done for us, we have to do it.
